ALL-STAR COP FIRST GAME OF THE SEASON

Showing the same pep which won many basketball games, the local All-Star basketball five romped away with a victory over the fast White Sox squad at the Y. M. C. A., Friday evening, winning by a score of 14 to 10. The game was fast from start to finish, the losers showing the better team play but falling down in basket shooting. Huger and Graf of the Stars showed up well in this department, the former caging four goals while the latter dropped in two.

The scores of the game:
All Stars: White Sox
Graf, 10; Anderson, Smith, 10; Huger, 4; Graf, 2; Zahn, 1; Smith, 1; Harrigan, 1; Inman, 1.
Free throws: Harrigan 2, Inman 2.
Referee: Craig.
The All Stars will play again New Year's day at the Y. M. C. A. All teams looking for games should write to S. Cherry street.

MILWAUKEE NORMAL AND BADGERS MEET TONIGHT

Milwaukee, Dec. 30.—The university of Wisconsin basketball five will meet Milwaukee Normal in a tilt at the normal school gym here tonight. MORRIS MILLER

The deal which sent big Pete Schneider from the Cincinnati club to the Yankees adds one more "iron man" to the pitching force of the American league. This feature undoubtedly had much to do with Miller Huggins' decision to annex the right hander to his pitching staff. The Yankees closed the 1918 campaign without one of these very valuable pitching assets. Schneider has the youth and the physique for an unusual amount of work and since coming to the majors he has annually been among the leaders in point of activity on the diamond.

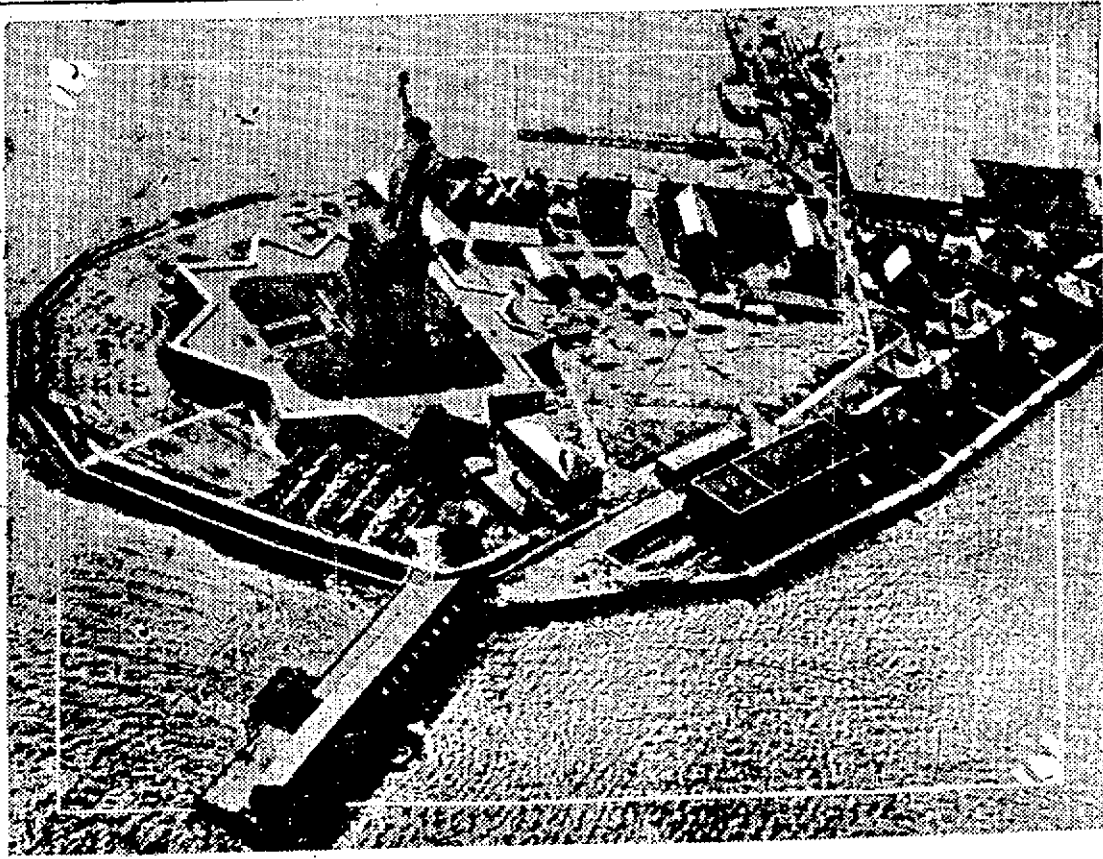

Schneider was not as successful in the 1918 endeavors as he had been in the preceding campaign. In the 1917 season Schneider was one of the top major league boxmen to account for twenty victories. Fred Toney and Schneider did most of the pitching while Matty's team was making such a great fight for the pennant that year. In view of his success only a season back and the fact that he is only 26 years of age Huggins believes that he will prove a consistent winner in the American league. He regards the 1918 record as nothing more than the mark for an off season when baseball conditions were so unsettled.

Since joining the Reds in June of the 1914 season Schneider had been one of the real "iron men" of the National league. The first year he was with the Cincinnati club he took part in twenty-nine games between June and the close of the season. In 1916 Schneider appeared in forty-eight games, pitching a total of 1,100 innings, or about thirty-one complete games in the one season. Tom

The Statue of Liberty, picture taken from an airplane.

Next to their own mothers, wives and sweethearts, the most welcome sight to the U. S. soldier boys returning from overseas is the Statue of Liberty. The joy of the returning troops, pent up for days while at sea, bursts its bounds when the statue looms up on the horizon. The above picture of the famous statue on Bedloe's Island was taken from an airplane. The tents and buildings of Fort Wood are visible.

PEACE PROCEEDINGS

The Associated Press in The Daily Gazette

Probably there never has been a more notable galaxy of newspaper writers assembled for any event in world's history than is now in France awaiting the opening of the Peace Conference.

Without question the momentous news each day will make the most absorbing reading in the annals of time and the ability of the writers to portray the occurrences will be of great importance to the newspapers as well as to the public.

Associated Press Sends Noted Men Across.

You have been reading the foreign news of the Associated Press in The Daily Gazette each day as it has been taken by the telegraph operator from the leased wire directly in our office and you are familiar with the splendid quality of the news stories.

The report of the Peace Conference will be as good as the best writers can produce it. The Associated Press has sent a staff of able men, eighteen in number, headed by Melville Stone,

General Manager, than whom there is no one more capable to supervise the chronicling of the news.

The staff includes the chief of the London, Paris, Rome and Berlin bureaus and the Associated Press service will be amplified by the "Havas News Service", the big press association of Europe.

The Associated Press has access also to the reports of all its clients who may have staff correspondents and special writers at the conference.

You will read every phase of the conference in The Daily Gazette and if you are not a regular subscriber now it is important that you place your order at once that you may miss none of this interesting material.

If you live in Rock County, on rural routes or in nearby territory send $1.00 for a 2-months' subscription or $4.00 for one year. Outlying subscription rates 50c per month, $6.00 per year. City of Janesville 50c per month, $6.00 per year.

PETER J. GOODMAN PNEUMONIA VICTIM

Another of City's Prominent Young Men Called by Death—With City Commissioner for Five Years.

The entire community is shocked by the untimely death of one of its foremost citizens, Peter J. Goodman, who passed away at his home, 335 South Jackson street at one o'clock Sunday afternoon, after a week's illness with pneumonia. In the death of Mr. Goodman the city has lost another of its prominent younger citizens, one who had worked all his life for the betterment of the city. During the five years in which he served as commissioner for the city he worked industriously and painstakingly and his record is a most remarkable one. Many miles of improved streets in the city stand as a monument to his faithful work and bear mute testimony of the great interest he took in civic affairs.

Peter Joseph Goodman was a life long resident of Janesville, having been born in the city, October 23, 1884, being only thirty-four years of age at the time of his death. He attended the public schools and upon completing his education entered the garage business for himself. At the age of twenty-eight he was elected one of three city commissioners. His business success and his energetic enthusiasm were responsible for his election to so important an office. As commissioner he acted as street superintendent and he more than fulfilled in every way his duties as such. He was well liked by all who made his acquaintance and his death will be mourned by hundreds of friends.

In September of 1914 he married Miss Nellie Gaffney at her home in Chicago and shortly afterward they took up their permanent residence in this city. A kind and loving husband and father, his death is deeply mourned by his widow and two children, Dorothy, age 9 and John age 1, who with his father Michael Goodman, and two brothers, Thomas, formerly of Camp Grant but now of this city, and Edward, with the army in France, survive him. He was a member of St. Patrick's church and of the local Eagles lodge.

Since his retirement from public life last spring he has been acting as one of the superintendents at the General Motors company plant and up until the time of his illness had been most active in his work.

Funeral services will be held from St. Patrick's church at nine o'clock tomorrow morning. Interment will be made in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Mrs. Mary Kemmett
Mrs. Mary Kemmett, a former resident of Janesville, passed away at five o'clock this morning at the home of her daughter Mrs. Timothy McCue in Chicago. The remains are to be brought to this city for interment. Deceased is survived by four daughters and one son, West Allen, Mrs. L. Bibbins and Mrs. Richard Carroll, both of Beloit and Mrs. Timothy McCue and Mrs. F. Johnson, both of Chicago.

John J. Griesmer
John J. Griesmer, aged forty, of Mauston, Wis., passed away at Mercy hospital early this morning after a two week's illness with pneumonia. He was survived by his widow, deceased having been working at Camp Grant and was on his way to his home in Mauston when he was suddenly taken ill in this city and removed to Mercy hospital. The remains have been removed to Ryan's undertaking rooms and will be shipped to Mauston this evening.

Le Moine Leusch
Le Moine Leusch, the thirteen months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leusch passed away at the home of his parents, 407 West Milwaukee street, at one o'clock Sunday night. The child had been ill only nine days. He is survived by his sorrowing parents, one sister, Viola, and one brother Joseph.

The funeral will be held from the late home Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. Cummings will conduct the services. The remains will be placed in Oak Hill until.

PERSONAL MENTION

On Sick Report.
Mrs. George Miller, 422 North Washington street is recovering from an attack of the influenza. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Webber of Washington are confined to the house with illness.

William McCue of Locust street is on the sick list. He is rapidly recovering.

Richard Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Harris of Sinclair street, is rapidly recovering from a recent illness.

T. E. Miller, rural carrier for route number 12, is quite ill, and has been obliged to give up the route for the present.

With the Clubs.
The Woman's club met at the home of Mrs. B. W. Way of Beloit college opened the program by a discussion of the current events of the day, after which the third lecture in the series was given: "The Extension of Europe into the Non-European World, 1815-1878." The general character of the period, French monopoly in colonization, the French expansion; Russian expansion; the Far East opened to the West, and the miraculous growth of the United States were topics that were well discussed. The club is taking much interest in the lectures this winter, as they are of special interest after the war, and the colonization of the world's countries is being discussed. There was a large attendance. Who listen with much interest to Prof. War, who is one of the best known authorities of history in the west.

COUNCIL WILL DECIDE DANCE HALL QUESTION

Bar, On Dance Halls Must Be Enforced By City Council At Meeting This Evening. Improvement Noted

Will Janesville's young folks dance on New Year's Eve? That is the question that is uppermost in the minds of the young people of this city and it is up to the city council who will decide the question at the regular meeting of this evening.

Doctor S. B. Buckmaster, city health officer has placed a ban on dance halls and it is now up to the city officials to endorse the ban or allow the dance halls to open over the holidays.

In discussing the influenza situation in the city, this morning, Doctor Buckmaster stated that in his opinion the epidemic was not getting any worse and that the influenza had been at a standstill, and he expected it to start decreasing at once.

Although the cases in the city at the present time greatly exceed the number of cases in October, the death rate is far below the October death rate. In October there were over forty deaths from influenza and pneumonia, and so far this month there has been none.

Other surrounding cities report the epidemic subsiding rapidly and it is expected that a decrease will be noted in this city within the next few days.

The houses of the city are now being placarded with large red signs bearing the word "influenza" and no person in the home placarded with the word "influenza" is allowed to leave or enter the house. A heavy fine is the penalty for any person caught violating the quarantine.

ANDREW CONNELL DIES IN FRANCE

Popular Janesville Young Man Succumbs to Disease Overseas. Member of 86th Division.

Andrew Connell son of Mrs. Mary Connell, 215 Lincoln street, a member of Company D, 81st Engineers, died in France of disease caused by a telegram received by his grief stricken mother this afternoon.

He was a member in the 86th Division, having left Janesville early in July for Camp Grant. He was chosen to go overseas with the Black Hawk division and his letters from France have all spoke of his gratification at being able to get overseas.

Andrew Connell graduated from the Janesville high school in 1913 and while attending school made an enviable record as an athlete. He was considered by critics to be one of the best foot ball players that ever represented the local school. He was captain of the foot ball team in 1912. He was also a member of the Forum and later the Rusk Lyceum literary societies.

A good student, an excellent athletic and a true sportsman, Andrew made an enviable record while attending school. He graduated with high honors and soon afterward accepted a position in Rockford which he held until he was called for service. He was 24 years of age.

He leaves to mourn his loss a widowed mother and five brothers and seven sisters. He was a devout member of St. Patrick's church.

time of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Souman of Third street. He has just been discharged from an officers' training camp in Minneapolis. He left here on Saturday to visit his parents in Michigan before returning to Winona.

William Christopher has returned home to Albany. He spent the past week in town visiting at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Saunders, of Milton avenue.

Frank Joyce of Washington street has returned to Chicago after spending several days at his home in this city.

Soldiers and Sailors.
Fred Kildow of Whitewater has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Jacobs during the past few days. He was recently released from active service in the army at a training camp in New Jersey.

Great joy has been caused among the relatives of Mrs. Geo. Jacobs by a letter received from her brother, Edward, who has been in France. This letter is the first news received from him since August and fears were felt that he was dead. He writes that he is well and with the army of occupation entering on German soil.

Private Thomas E. Floen, has returned to Camp Funston, Kansas. He came up to Janesville to spend Xmas with friends in Janesville.

Adolph Hammarlund, who came home from Charlotte Field, where he is in the aviation, has returned after a short Xmas vacation.

Ensign Kendall Dexter has returned to Pelham Bay, where he is in training. He was the guest of friends in this city during the past week.

Lieutenant Charles Vescoto of Albany was in town last week. He was returning home to spend Xmas with his mother. He came from Camp Center, Mich., and returned on Sunday.

Lieut. Walter Craig is home for the holidays.

Clement Roberts, who enjoyed a furlough of several days this past week at his home on Chestnut street, has returned to the Great Lakes.

Harold Hengney, who has been in training at Camp Shelby, Miss., has been mustered out of the service this past week.

Stanley Horwood is home from an eastern camp. He is spending a short furlough at his home in this city.

Charles Xeno, who is in training at an enlist school in Chicago, is home to spend a few days furlough.

Valentine Mott has returned to the Great Lakes Naval Station, where he is furloughed of a week at his home in this city.

Sergeant Claude Dextelmer of Ft. Atkinson was in the city Saturday, the guest of friends.

Social Happenings.
Miss Louise Bennett of 310 North Terrace street was to have entertained this evening the Westminster Guild. A surprise was to be served at half past six and a program enjoyed, but they have decided to postpone it until later, when it will be announced.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. King of Fremont street entertained at a family dinner Christmas day. Mrs. M. Skelly of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Quigley and Mr. and Mrs. Wright of Beloit, and Mr. and Mrs. King of Milwaukee, and Mr. and Mrs. Gifford of Avalon.

Prof. and Mrs. C. G. Titcomb of Pasadena, Calif., recently gave a delightful luncheon to a few Janesville friends. Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond being the guest of honor. Others present were Prof. and Mrs. George Gookins, Mrs. William Gookins, Mrs. Vera Gookins, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Smith, Mrs. J. W. Sale, Ella De Baun, Mrs. Minnie Yates, Mrs. Bond sang several of her new published songs with such soul-inspiring effect that the guests were all present.

Mrs. Bond is singing in many hospitals here and doing much philanthropic work. The coming year she plans to go to London, Scotland and Paris to sing, and then into Belgium, where she will donate the result of her work to Belgium relief work. Prof. Titcomb still handles the piano with his old time charm and skill. He played one of Prof. Harry G. Arnold's latest compositions. Prof. Arnold is a former Janesville resident. These reunions of the Wisconsin people who spend their winters in California, are much enjoyed by all who are fortunate enough to be able to attend.

MILK COMPANY CHANGES HANDS

H. J. Casey Buys Plant of Janesville Pure Milk Company From Mrs. E. R. Craft.

An announcement of interest is being made today by the Janesville Pure Milk Company telling of a change in ownership, the entire plant having been purchased by H. J. Casey who will continue its operation along the same lines of good service for which the company has always been favorably known.

Since its start, several years ago, by the firm of Gridley & Craft, at 23 Janesville Pure Milk Company has always given the very best of service and has grown to be Janesville's leading retail milk distributing depot. In point of equipment and volume of business the plant would do credit to a city much larger than Janesville. Upon the dissolving of partnership of Gridley & Craft the business was carried on by the late E. R. Craft and until the present has been under the very capable personal direction of Mrs. E. R. Craft.

The new owner, H. J. Casey, was for many years manager of the local branch of the Al Blatz Brewing Company of Milwaukee. He has many friends by the score who join in wishing him all success in his new business.

The annual meeting of the policyholders of the Bower City Mutual Fire Insurance Co. will be held at the office of the company at 17 So. Main street, Monday, January 13th, at 8:00 P. M. for the election of directors and any other business that may properly come before the meeting.

The Thirteenth Commandment

By RUPERT HUGHES

"Well, that's a new complaint, anyway, but — well — of course you wouldn't do anything wrong; but if you lived alone you'd be misjudged, and men would keep throwing temptation in your way."

"I had plenty of that when I was living at home."

"Daphne!" He cried out in pain at the very thought.

She went on, educating him with a vengeance: "Plenty of temptation and plenty of opportunity, daddy. It wasn't your fault. You gave me all the protection that anybody could, daddy. But you can't protect people all the time. And it was when you trusted me most that you protected me most. People are just beginning to realize that even in penitentiaries the higher the walls and the stricter the guards the more prisoners try to escape. They're sending convicts out to work on roads now with no guards at all. And they do their work and come back. Don't you think women can be trusted as far as convicts?"

"I suppose so," he sighed. But he was convinced of the security of neither the convicts nor of the women under these new anarchies. He was convinced of only one thing, and that was his helplessness.

Daphne took him home in a taxicab. At the apartment they caught Bayard just rushing for his office. He greeted his father with whirlwind affection, but he knew that he would please Wesley better by hurrying on to his office than by neglecting his business for the purpose of entertainment.

Wesley took Lella by storm with his lavish and wholehearted praise. He had not seen her before. He gathered her to his breast, then held her out at arm's length to praise her and to praise Bayard for bringing her into the family.

Mrs. Kip did not delay long the assault on Daphne's position. But Wesley said:

"We've had a long talk and I guess she's pretty set in her way. She's a good girl, though, mamma. And she knows her own mind better than we do. Anyway, it's her own mind. Let her have her way and if anything goes wrong she can always come back home."

His wife boiled over. It made her feel as much at home as an old kettle on a stove to have her husband there to hold over on "Wesley Kip, are you going to set there and encourage that girl to ruin her life and her reputation without doing anything to protect her?"

"Oh, I guess she's not going to ruin anything. After all, the best way to protect folks is to trust 'em."

It was laid plain, however, by making the suggestion that his wife remain as a companion for his child. Mrs. Kip took it as a sign that he wanted to get rid of her, and Daphne refused to take it at all.

Wesley sat pondering in silence for a while; then he rose and, mumbling, "It's back in a little while," took his hat and went out.

They wondered what mischief he was up to and what folly he would commit. He came back in half an hour with a smile of success.

INFLUENZA MAY COME BACK

Public Health Service Says Epidemic Caused 350,000 Deaths In United States Since Sept. 15.

Grip Is Breaking Out Again In Many Sections.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Between 300,000 and 350,000 deaths from influenza and pneumonia have occurred among the civilian population of the United States since September 15, according to the estimate of the public health service. These calculations were based on reports from cities and states keeping accurate records, and health officials believe they are conservative. The epidemic still persists, but death tolls are decreasing, according to reports reaching here. The disease is breaking out again in the country, but in general milder and less severe epidemic conditions are not expected.

While the epidemic has passed, the danger from the grip germ is still here. If you catch cold or allow yourself to become weak and run down you are exposed to this danger.

This is the time to keep Father John's Medicine on hand and to begin taking it at the first sign of a cold. If you need a tonic, no better food medicine can be found because the elements of which Father John's Medicine is composed are all pure, wholesome and nourishing and have been proven by scientific tests to be of the greatest nutritive value.

The fact that Father John's Medicine is guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form makes it the safe medicine for every member of the family from the youngest to the oldest. Get a bottle today.

"I guess it's all right. I been thinking about all the different things been said. We don't want Daphne living by herself and she don't feel like she ought to trespass on Lella's home, so I got an idea and went down and saw the janitor or superintendent or whatever he is, and I asked him mightn't it be there was somebody in this building wanted to rent a room to a nice girl. And he said there was a young couple felt the rent was a little high and had an extra room. So we went up and took a look at it. Right nice young woman, name of Chivvis or something like that; said she'd be glad to take my daughter in. I was thinking that if Daphne was up there she could see Bayard and Lella when she was lonesome or anything; and she'd be handy where they could keep an eye on her if she got sick or anything."

The three women looked at him in amazement. He had solved the riddle that baffled them all and had compromised the irreconcilables.

"It'll bet the place is a sight and the woman a freak," said Mrs. Kip. "Let's go have a look at her."

So all four went up in the elevator to the top floor. They were about to ring the bell of one of the big front apartments like Bayard's but Wesley checked them.

"It's in the back."

The women exchanged glances and smiles behind the important shoulder blades of Wesley, the manager. He rang a bell and a young woman opened the door. As Lella said afterward:

"She had the whole map of New England in her face, and her middle name was Boston."

But she was young, in a placid, Puritanical way, and she looked exceedingly clean and correct. Her very smile was neat, exactly adjusted between those of the gracious hostess and of the landlady.

Mrs. Chivvis led the way to the room that was for rent. It took Daphne at once. Spaciousness is the first luxury in a rented room and Puritan beauty has a grace all its own. The mahogany bed with its twisted posts, the excellent linen and the honesty of everything won her completely.

She felt a sense of relief from the rather gaudy beauty of Lella's apartment. She felt that Mrs. Chivvis, who showed such fine restraint in her furniture, would be equally discreet in minding her own affairs.

"I'll take it," she said; "that is, if you'll take me."

Mrs. Chivvis said she would. She said it with a New Englandish parsimony of enthusiasm, but her eyes were

When she came on him.

Daphne reached the theater at seven o'clock and sat in the dark on a canvas rock, watching the stage hands gather and listening to their repartee.

Batterson arrived at length. He was in one of his humor moods. He asked Daphne if she had memorized her lines and she said she had. He told her that he would give her another rehearsal the next day after breakfast. "After breakfast," he explained, was one o'clock p. m.

Next morning Daphne presented herself to Batterson and endured one of his rehearsals, with his assistant reading all the cues in a lifeless voice. Batterson was more discouraged than she was. He showed it for a time by a patience that was of the sort one shows to a shy imbecile.

He was so restrained that Daphne broke out for him, "Do you think I am a complete idiot, Mr. Batterson?"

"Far from it, my dear," said Batterson. "You are a very intelligent young woman. The trouble is that you are too intelligent for the child's play of the stage. It's all a kind of big nursery and you can't forget that facts are not facts in this toy game. If you could let yourself go and be foolish and play doll house you might succeed. It's hard even when you know how. But it's impossible as long as you try to reason it out. It's like music and fiction and all the arts. You've got to pretend or you can't feel and you can't make anybody else feel."

And that, indeed, was Daphne's agony. She could not release her imagination or command her clear vision to see what was not there.

Night after night she reported at the theater and left it when the curtain rose. On one of these evenings Tom Duane met her outside the stage door. His apology was that he felt it his duty to look after his client.

He invited Daphne to ride home in his car, which was waiting at the curb. She declined with thanks. He urged that she take a little spin in the park. She declined without thanks. He sighed that it was a pity to lose the moonlight.

She said she would get enough when she walked home. He asked if he might "toddle along." She could hardly refuse without crassly insulting him. They loitered slowly up the quiet reach of Seventh avenue. He questioned her about her work with all the grateful flattery there is in an appetite for another's autobiography. She found it easy to tell him of her difficulties. He extracted encouragement or indirect compliment out of all of them.

When they arrived at her apartment house she said, "Sorry I can't ask you up, but I have no reception room, and I'm tired out."

After having wasted enough of your time on me," he said. "I'll see you to the elevator."

As Daphne stepped into the hallway she found Clay Winburn there, waiting grimly. He sprang to his feet with a gasp of relief. He caught sight of Duane and his joy died instantly.

Winburn loved Daphne and wanted her for his own. He had counted her his own, and still had neither refunded the engagement ring nor paid for it. Daphne was more pained with Winburn's misery than with Duane's fecklessness.

"Won't you come up, Clay?" she asked.

He murmured, "Can we be alone for a little talk?"

"I'm afraid not. The Chivvisses, you know."

"Will you take a little walk with me in the park?"

"All right," she said as she led the way out into the street. "I'm pretty tired, though. I walked home from the theater."

"With Duane?" Clay snarled. "You weren't too tired for that?"

Daphne thought of the motor ride and the supper she had declined. She said, "Are you dragging me out here for the sake of a fight?"

"There'll be no fight if you'll cut out that man Duane."

"Am I to have no friends at all?"

"You can have all you want, provided—"

"Let me give you one little hint, Clay, for your own information. Every time this Mr. Duane that you're so afraid of meets me he does his best to help me get my chance and he tells me only pleasant things. Every time you've come to see me lately you've been either a sick cat or a roaring tiger."

She was planning to urge him to help her and make their meetings rosier. But, lover-like, he took umbrage and pain and despair from her advice, and since they were again at the vestibule he sighed, "Good night, Mrs. Duane," and flung out into the dark.

Daphne sighed, and the poor elevator man who saw so much of this sort of thing sighed with her and for her.

CHAPTER XII.

All this while Daphne was kept in readiness to take Miss Kemble's part in case the illness of her child should result in death and in the further case that she should be unable to finish her performances. With the theatrical season in such bad estate and most of Reben's companies and theaters losing money heavily, Sheila Kemble was his one certain dependence. He called her his breadwinner.

Miss Kemble's baby passed the crisis and recovered. And then the mother, worn out with the double strain, caught a little chill that became a blinding, choking cold. She went through the Saturday matinee in a whisper, but the night performance was beyond her.

And now at last Daphne's chance arrived. The Saturday night house was enormous in spite of the heat. There were enough people there to make fourteen hundred dollars—twenty-five hundred for the day.

Daphne, trudging to the theater for her usual stupid rebuff, walked into this crisis of her life.

Reben himself knocked at her dressing room door where Miss Winsor was helping her with her make-up. He implored her to be calm, and he was so tremulous that she stuttered. He told her that if she made good he would let her play the part till Miss Kemble got well. He would pay her a handsome bonus. He would put her out at the head of a number two company next season.

Batterson came at last and ordered him off the stage. Reben obeyed him. Then Batterson talked to her. He told her that there was no reason to fear the house. A Saturday night audience was always easy. It wanted its money's worth! It would help to get it.

"I see," said Daphne. "I'm not afraid of the audience."

"Then what on earth are you afraid of?"

"I'm afraid of me!"

Batterson laughed scornfully. "Oh, you! You're going to score a knockout. You're going to make a big hit!"

"Yes," said Daphne, "so you've always told me."

The curtain rose. Miss Winsor and the young man skipped onto their job; the butler stalked; Eldon entered and made his exit. Mrs. Vining spread her skirts and sailed on, then Eldon went back. Finally Daphne's cue came.

Dinner Stories

Two shipwrecked sailors were on a desert island. They were utterly miserable, pinched with hunger and cold. The one more wretched than the other said to his companion, "Can you pray, Bill?"

"Can you sing a hymn?"

"No."

"Well," said the first "let's have something religious; let's have a collection."

A member of a diplomatic corps tells a story of a Persian who came to this country on a special mission. Among those who entertained him was a wealthy man who invited the Oriental to his country house. The morning of the guest's arrival the host visited him in his apartment, and was astonished to see him hopping about the floor in the strangest way imaginable. The host ventured to ask the reason for this curious action. The Persian replied:

"You see, this carpet is green, with pink roses here and there. Green is a sacred color with us, so I am obliged to hop from rose to rose. It is good exercise, but rather fatiguing."

On Johnny's first day at school he was given a registration card on which his mother was to write his birth record. The following day he arrived tardy and without the registration slip.

"Johnny," said the teacher, "you must bring an excuse for being tardy, and don't forget the slip about when you were born."

All out of breath next day Johnny rushed in, holding a note from his mother.

"Teacher," he gasped, "I brought the one about being tardy, but I forgot my excuse about being born."

Along the Oklawaha— Florida's Romantic River

One of the Last Battle Grounds of the Seminole Indians

Story of a Midwinter Sail Over This Picturesque River Where January Is As Balmy As June—The Home of the Alligator and Birds of Brilliant Plumage.

FLORIDA as a winter resort is famous the world over and the average seeker after pleasure and freedom from care usually contents himself with the ease and comforts afforded by the magnificent hotels which line the Eastern coast of that State. While this is, of course, delightful, yet by lingering under the spell of the man-made beauty of those wonderful hotels and gardens one misses the real natural glory of that land of wonderful jungles. With a little travel to the interior and the enduring of trifling inconveniences one may see wild beauty and variegated scenery similar to the jungles of Asia or Africa. Many persons journey to these far away countries in search of experience and excitement, although we have in our own land a wilderness which is quite as interesting to the traveler on pleasure bent and which is free from the danger and hardship of African travel. Added to this, it boasts of the same balmy climate of the world-famed Riviera.

Within a few hours travel of millions of our population we have combined in one section of Florida wilderness of jungle filled with nearly every variety of reptile and with birds of gorgeous plumage, beauty of scenery, and a winter climate with clear, warm days and invigorating air unsurpassed by any country in the world. All this variety of enjoyment and recreation may be had in a trip up the Oklawaha River—that ever-winding stream which winds its way through Northeastern Florida. Away back in 1860 a man from Vermont discovered the beauty of this river and conceived the idea of running excursion boats upon its waters. "For," he declared, "the people should see this picturesque water with its tropical foliage and its birds and reptiles." At that time it was the home of hundreds of alligators and a perfect aviary of birds. It took several years to clear the river of fallen trees, brush and other obstructions but by the end of the Civil War he was ready for the boats which began running from Palatka to Silver Springs—a distance of one hundred and thirty miles. Since that time hundreds of tourists have found joy in the mythical labyrinths of the glorious tropical waterway.

The Oklawaha.

One bright balmy January morning the writer boarded the Steamer "Oklawaha" at Palatka. The boat was old-fashioned and by no means palatial. At certain angles she looked as though she might topple over at any moment, yet she was well balanced in every way, while from another point she resembled a house boat which had been pulled up on shore. There are no wharves between Palatka and Silver Springs and whenever the boat stopped she simply ran up to the bank and the passengers stepped ashore. The little steamer, however, was comfortable and smooth-running, and in the end the primitiveness of her make-up really added to the pleasure of the trip. The cooking was done by an old Southern negro of the "bofo" de war type, and his cornbread would tempt the palate of the most fastidious epicure, to say nothing of his crisp bacon, fried chicken and grilled sweet potatoes. The table was set in the cabin on the lower deck and all the passengers were served at one sitting. About twenty-five persons were on board and after partaking of a genuine Southern dinner during which everybody became acquainted with everybody else, general good humor prevailed and the passengers adjourned to the deck to enjoy the scenery. The warm sun spread over the decks and those who had come from homes where snow and ice were the order of the day threw off their wraps and fairly revelled in balmy air. We left the wharf about 1 o'clock in the afternoon and ran up broad, calm

St. John River for several miles before we reached the Oklawaha, Crooked River.

Oklawaha is an Indian name which means "Crooked River," and nothing could be more appropriate for this winding stream, as during the entire voyage we were never able to sail in a straight line farther than three hundred feet. As the boat glided on the river narrowed. Then we saw the shores at close range—a perfect jungle of trees with an undergrowth thicker than that of the Dismal Swamp. It was made up of towering pines, palmettos and cypress all covered with vines of various kinds, air plants and Spanish moss. The orchid, the sweet-scented jasmine, the rhododendron and the magnolia peeped out through the tropical growth and filled the air with a delightful odor.

At other points where we passed through patches of water lilies they swayed and dipped their heads forward as if bowing us a welcome to their marshy home. It was necessary to move slowly for some of the curves were so sharp that in making turns the boat bumped the opposite shore and the passengers amused themselves by pulling vines or moss from the trees.

Battle Ground and Orange Grove. At one place the Captain pointed out a part of the swamp as one of the last battle grounds of the Seminole Indians in the days of the famous Osceola, one of America's greatest Indian warriors. It was only a cluster of old moss-covered trees with a thick underbrush—an ideal place for an Indian ambush.

Late in the afternoon the boat ran up to the bank and stopped at an orange grove which seemed to be the only clearing anywhere along the river. There an enterprising man has set up a house in the picturesque wilderness and is raising splendid fruit. Everybody went ashore while the crew loaded on an extra supply of wood to feed our engine. The passengers wandered about among the orange trees and sampled the fruit, purchasing it on the tree.

The land about this place is said to be rich in the remains of monsters of bygone ages, and a few years ago a party of hunters unearthed a part of the bones of a marine monster which is supposed to have been at least ninety feet in length. Numbers of Indian sand mounds have been discovered and some were found to contain implements made of copper—relics of the early days of the Seminoles when they left the Creeks of Georgia and wandered into sunny Florida.

Night Scenes Fantastic.

Soon after leaving the orange grove the sun set over the jungle in all its red glory, going down behind the palmettos like a ball of fire. Then night fell over the wilderness and the scene became even more beautiful. The tall pines stood out like sentinels guarding the silent river as they were silhouetted against the sky. The odor of the jasmine and orange blossoms wafted through the soft night air filled our nostrils and we sat and gazed in dreamy fashion out into this Florida wilderness. Supper was hurriedly eaten as everyone was loathe to leave the deck even for so short a time.

By and by the moon came up and flooded the waters with its silvery light and the trees took on fantastic forms as the wind swayed their moss-covered limbs. We sailed in this fairyland of light for an hour or more when the sky became overcast.

Suddenly a strange weird light spread over the waters and turned the Spanish moss into chains of silver for a time. The birds, disturbed in their sleep, flitted from tree to tree, while the splashing of the water indicated that even the reptiles were disturbed by the sudden glare.

The illumination came from the upper deck of the "Oklawaha" where a huge iron box had been set up to act as a searchlight. It was a clumsy looking affair on the order of one of the paper burners used in cleaning up our city markets. The negro deck hands fed pine logs into the box and the dry wood blazed and crackled as it lit up the river and its shores. The weirdness of the scene was fascinating in the extreme and this was enhanced by the singing of the dusky crew as they piled on the logs.

It was after midnight when the passengers began to turn in and then they fell asleep listening to a negro with a clear tenor voice as he sang:

"Where the ring doves meet their mates,
Cooling at the cypress gates
Of the Oklawaha."

All night long the colored pilots kept their flambeaux burning and the resinous flames lit up the banks outside the staterooms, and from their berths the passengers could see far into the jungle. One or two of the women declared that they saw animals prowling about and that they were terrified lest the wild creatures should climb into their cabins. Of course, this was imagination pure and simple, as alligators, snakes, turtles and birds are the only inhabitants of the Oklawaha shores. Recently a modern searchlight has taken the place of the pine torches due to the fact that the authorities feared that during the season the sparks from the flames might set fire to the dry brush. While there was, of course, danger of this, the searchlight is not nearly so picturesque as the old-style light.

Plenty of Alligators.

Everybody was astir early in the morning and so eager to "view the landscape o'er" that little breakfast was eaten. About seven o'clock a small steamer passed us just at a point wide enough for that purpose, and except for a little boat which followed us, this seemed to be the only traffic on the stream. The morning was clear, and although it was January the day was like early June. All Nature seemed awake. The birds twittered as they flew back and forth across the river and the butterflies seemed to be pluming their wings in the sunlight as they lit on the bushes. Pretty soon the captain came on deck and began to point out alligator holes and at one place a good-sized crocodile which was taking a sun bath slid off the bank and splashed into the water. Then another, and still another followed. "I told you that alligators grew here!" said the jolly captain as everybody gazed in wonder on the ugly creatures. Turtles tumbled off the logs and a water snake sought safety by slipping through the route which projected into the water.

Silver Springs.

At times it seemed that our boat could hardly push through the swampy cabbage, and at others it seemed that we had reached the end of the river and were running directly into the bank. These scenes continued until noon when we ran into Silver Springs. There the transparent depths of the water gave one the impression that the boat had turned itself into a living machine and that we were moving through the air. Every pebble and every aquatic plant stood out as clear as if it were on shore instead of at the bottom of the lake. Even the alligators swimming about seemed to be in an aquarium or at least in a tank behind a glass plate. These springs have a surface area of about three acres and are held in five limestone basins. The largest basin is about eighty-five feet deep and two hundred feet wide and the water is so transparent that a dime thrown to the bottom can be clearly seen and all objects thrown into this particular pool have an iridescent glow.

The trip ends at this point and the passengers take a little jerkwater train going to Ocala, where connection is made for Jacksonville, and the city is reached in the evening. Those who prefer to make a quick trip may take a smaller and faster steamer which makes the trip in a day, but those who love Nature prefer the more primitive fashion of the slow-going boats. The journey of one hundred and thirty miles was made in twenty-four hours over a river which flows through the very heart of Florida. There is no other place in this country and perhaps in the whole world where one can in comparative comfort and safety experience such weird wilderness of natural beauty and fantastic night scenes as on this picturesque stream.

Beckworth says that after his time with Johnson was up, his Indian friends in Wisconsin kept him with them, taught him hunting and trapping, and that he then laid the foundation for his later adventures in the far west.

ANNOUNCEMENT

THE Janesville Pure Milk Company has been purchased by the undersigned and will continue to be operated along the same lines as heretofore as Janesville's leading retail milk distributing station.

Everything which will contribute to the sanitary distribution of milk and cream will be used. Efficient service and the production of quality milk and cream will be our aim.

We solicit a continuance of the patronage of all Janesville Pure Milk Company customers who are already familiar with our high standard of service. If you are not already a patron of ours we will be glad to serve you and are sure you will like our service.
